The Intelligencer. EUROPEAN CORRESPOND-ENCE.

Letter from Rev. D. W. Fisher, of Wheeling.

Amsteadam, Holland, June, 1876.
Editors of the Intelligencer:
My last letter, if you have received and published it, gave my impressions of Scotland. After leaving that part of Great Britain, my next ten days of travel were spent in England, in visiting the Lake country, the manufacturing district that centers at Leeds, Bedford, the home of Bunyan, and London. But I pass all this by for the present, because it is my purpose to return to England and spend a little season there after having completed my journey over a part of the Continent of Europe. It is therefore only fair, on all sides, that I should reserve until the last my views in regard to that portion of Great Britain.

CROSSING TO THE CONTINENT. INGLIAND AND THE UNITED STATES.

The history of the United States is closely connected with that of Holland: I have seen the house in Amsterdam where used to live Heinrich Hadson, after whom our famous river is called. I have stood at the door of the house where lived John Robinson, the founder of the Independents from whom our Congregationalists have sprung. From Delitainen the Mayflower salled on her first voyage to the bleak shores of New England, with her precions cargo of emigrants. And here in Amsterdam is the house still standing whence she was started on her second voyage. Was not a part of our eastern states originally "New Holland?" On yes! Old Holland was an asylum of liberty for the oppressed. And the same liberty she helped to transplaint to our own shores. Her sons and grand-sons still are among our best people.

RELIGION. CROSSING TO THE CONTINENT.

CROSSING TO THE CONTINENT.

From Harwich, in England, I crossed to Rotterdam, Holland, in company with a couple of friends, who are my associates in travel for this part of the journey. The voyage is over the North Sea, and is accomplished in ten or twelve hours. Persons who are familiar only with the trip across the English Channel to France or Belgium will appreciate the superior advantage of this route when I say that we had a splendid steamer, a 'sea as, smooth as the Ohio river, and that we went to bed in a comfortable state-room and slepts soundly all night. The horror of travelers is the sea-sickness of the British Channel.

A STRANGE LAND. A STRANGE LAND.

We woke next morning on the Nice, was or Meuse, one of the branches by which the Rhine finds its way to the sea. And the first impression made when we went on deck was the strangeness of the scenes. We are evidently in a region very different from any which we have yet beheld. Holland, I may say parenthetically, is one of the most novel countries in all Europe, in the estimation of an American. Venice is not so quaint as Rotterdam or Amsterdam; but look at the landscape as we pass up this river! The question arises here, and will return a hundred times again as we travel over the country, is Holland a part of the continent of Europe, or is it, more properly speaking, a series of Islands? No body can conclusively answer the inquiry. The sea is just over there, and is a little higher than the land. The dykes keep it from overflowing a very large part of the Kingdom, and there are canals very-The sea is just over there, and is a little higher than the land. The dykes keep it from overflowing a very large part of the Kingdom, and there are canals everywhere. Away across the flat meadows, and far in the interior, you can see the white sails of ships or the smoke of steamboats, as they make their way over these watery highroads, and wind mills are forever tossing their giant arms in the air, as they pump water or do other work, in every direction to which you turn your eyes.

until you reach Rotterdam, or go on to Amsterdam. These cities are built mainly upon ground artificially made and upon piles driven into the earth. These piles piles driven into the earth. These piles frequently give way, and the consequence is that hundreds of the houses are out of shape. Sometimes they lean out at the and sometimes they are let down in middle. They look a good deal as in whad been on a spree and had been sindenly caught by some magic spell and fixed in their reeding positions. It is the business of an officer concurse, them and so long as occupied. The gable ends are quite as competed. The gable ends are quite as competed by turned as the sides, tured toward the street. At the toriary of the concept of the property o idenly caught by some magic spell and ed in their reeling positions. It is the fixed in their reeling positions. It is the business of an officer to examine them in a hurry.

TRIUMPHS OF LADOR AND SKILL.

And he has achieved wonders. He has made his country, in a sense which is not often true of a people. Holland has had a hand to hand fight with the mighty ocean for centuries. By the erection of dykes vast tracts of land have been forced from the arms of the sea which had long been stretched over them. And by these walls alone is the ocean kept, in time of storm, from rolling far toward the interior, even beyond its natural boundaries, and aweeping Holland with devastation. Safety is insured only by watchfulness like that of a city against a besieging army. And here, on this soil wrung out of the hand of the sea, the Hollander has built cities and cultivated farms, which have been the admiration of the world. It is a mistake to suppose that even now the people have sunk into lethargy. They do not make much noise abroad, but at home they are busy as ever. Look, for example, at the new canal by which Amaterdam has recently opened a way to the ocean, such as the demands of commerce necessitate. Look, to, at the sings which travel far and wide over the seas, and by those and a hundred other industries abe shows that she is a land full of energy.

HISTORICAL MEMORIS. Teachers' Normal Institute at Nicholas C. H., Nicholas C. H., July 8. The Teachers' Normal Institute is in session for the last week and has been well attended. A large number of teachers are in attendance. Our citizens are taking a lively interest in the exercises, and the sessions, morning and evening, are largely attended, We feel no heatancy in declaring that the Institute will give a considerable impetus to the cause of education in exercise.

BELLAIRE LOCALS.—The numerous past ages within this small district have become stereotyped. It could wish that the Dutchman's world was bigger. But when I begin to reflect upon the position which Helland fills in the world of art and Bellahus Locals.—The numerous pools of stagnant water in the gutters still continue to offend the noses and endanger the health of the public.

The hunting and fishing party which has been camping in the mountains at Cheat River, West Virginia, have returned to the city without a great deal of game. They tell some laughable incidents that happened during the expedition. which Helland fills in the world of art and of literature, I, as an American, must for a time hold my peace. The galleries are filled with the works of such masters as Rembrandt Van Dycke, Quentui Massys, Paul Potter, Rubens. In all the United States there is not a painting which is the equal of Paul Potter's bull. And this is the land of Erasmus, the father of modern learning in Europe, of Boerhave, Salinasius, Linnaeus, Descartes, and a multitude of other literary and scientific stars of the first magnitude.

HORSE MARKET people. RELIGION. Holland is a Protestant country. There is a large minority of Roman Catholies. The type of Protestantism was originally strongly Calvanistic. The decrees of the Synod of Dort are almost as famous as the Westminis' er Confession of Faith. I saw the old church where that Synod sat. This also was the country of Arminia, and here were fought some of the great theological battles of that past age. Both parties seem to have been extreme. Between them the good cause suffered. Today, I lear, the Protestantism of Holland, though still nominally strongly Calvanistic and Evangelical, is really largely rationalistic and materialistic. But there are some in all these continental countries who retain the spirit is a well as the letter of the piety of better days. D. W. F.

The regular monthly meeting of the irectors of the Baltimore & Ohio Rail-

The regular monthly meeting of the Directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company was held yesterday at Camden Station. Mr. John W. Garrett, the President, presided. There was more than a quorum of the members present, and Mr. Garrett received the congratulations of all on his safe return to Baltimore from his trip across the contlient, and on account of the evident beneficial results it had on his health. These courtesies over, the usual routine of business was transacted, after which the Board listened with great interest to a statement from President Garrett relative to his trip of 7,000 miles over the connections of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to the Pacific, and embodying his views as to the lessons that Baltimore business men and others might learn from his experience. He stated the prospects for increased business, in view of the great advantages of the port of Baltimore, and its geographical location to the cities of Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, &c. He called attention to the fact that the Cincinnati Southern railroad would be oven for one hundred and sixty miles alogic sales.

This is a historical country. No intelligent American needs to be told that this is one feature of its character. Our own Motley, whose name is venerated here, in his Dutch Republic, United Netherlands, and other works, has recorded the story. Never was a more bloody or heroic page written in human history, than that which belongs to the Spanish wars in this region of the world. All the forces which Alva and his royal master could bring to bear could not conquer the heroic Hollanders. It was my privilege to stand in Leyden, and in the old Town Hall—so famous for its siege and its almost miraculous deliverance. If any of your readers are not familiar with This is a historical country. No intelligent American needs to be told that this is one feature of its character. Our own Motley, whose name is venerated here, in his Dutch Republic, United Netherlands, and other works, has recorded the story. Never was a more bloody or heroic page written in human history, than that which belongs to the Spanish wars in this region of the world. All the forces which Alva and his royal master could bring to bear could not conquer the heroic Hollanders. It was my privilege to stand in Leyden, and in the idd Town Hall—so famous for its siege and its almost miraculous deliverance. If any of your readers are not familiar with the story let them speedily read it. But at every step the land is thronged with historical associations.
